Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Heredity and Social Fitness: A Study of Differential Mating in a Pennsylvania Family The object of this investigation was mainly twofold: First, to determine the mode of evolution of the various lines of a great network with reference to traits which have direct bearing on social efficiency; second, to study the variation in the grade of these traits and the relation of this variation to the types of mating. An answer was sought to the following questions: By what process does marked defect, such as lack of number-sense, or aggressiveness, disappear from some lines and persist in others? What measure of improvement is directly effected through selected matings? The data collected were further used to draw conclusions concerning comparative fecundity, comparative survival, differential migration, and various contentions of our immigration problem, and, finally, our conclusions were considered in their bearings on the present-day program for race betterment. The study comprises 1,822 individuals, nearly half of whom are in the direct line of descent from two pairs of German immigrants of more than a century ago. The remainder were considered in connection with the strains into which the descendants of these couples married. The research began with 4 young people, patients at the Institution for the Feeble-Minded of Western Pennsylvania, at Polk, Pennsylvania. When the wide variability of the material with reference to socially efficient traits became apparent, the study was extended to all so-called normal lines of the two networks, and a further attempt made to grade the individuals in calculating ability, aggressiveness, and perseverance. The first network, comprising lines A to E, was founded by an honest, aggressive, plucky, persevering, far-sighted man and his...
